Inswinging doors usually require door edge protection;
they get much more tough usage.

For over 20 years we have been furnishing our stainless steel door edge protectors to many satisfied customers for the following reasons:

- It does an excellent job of protecting the door edge.
- Hardly ever will it show any damage.
- The door edge protector is installed over the hinges - no need to make cutouts.
- It can be installed in minutes without removing the door.
- It can be installed with existing kickplates or with new kickplates.
- All edges are carefully deburred and all corners are slightly rounded.
- With its brushed finish, it is attractive looking.
- The 22-gauge stainless steel is thick enough to do the job, yet thin enough to accommodate the necessary door frame clearance.
- Dimpled holes are punched to recess screw heads.
- Plated Phillips head screws are furnished.
- It is inexpensive.
- You will not find anything else that is less expensive, provides greater protection and is easier to install.
